

EQUALITY POLICY

The Appledore Book Festival endeavours to be a friendly festival which encourages everyone to be involved regardless of age, gender, colour, ethnicity, disability, religious belief or non-belief.

This policy applies to committee members, service providers, voluntary helpers, speakers and audiences.

The speakers invited to the Festival are specifically selected to offer a diverse range of subject matter designed to appeal to the widest range of people possible.

The Festival also runs a dedicated schools programme to inspire the readers and writers of the future, encompassing all young people regardless of background.

The Festival also provides the opportunity for a local charity to co-operate with the Festival by running a café from which the charity receives funds.
